THE CAMPAIGN.

A Full Statement of the Situation in New York.

RAIN INTERFERES WITH PARADES

Blaine Holds Forth in Brooklyn While Cleveland Harangues the Connecticut Democracy—News and Gossip.

NEW YORK, Oct 30.—[Special.]—C. A. O'Rourke, manager of the New York city press association, is authority for the following political outlook in the Empire city: Out of the registered vote of 240,000 Cleveland will probably carry the city by 50,000, and if he could leave the metropolis with 90,000 he might feel tolerably assured of election. If there were no division among the democratic factions Cleveland would have a large majority, but it is more than probable that Tammany will knife him at every step. Districts which should poll a large democratic vote will fall behind, and in the first assembly district, probably the strongest democratic district in the town, and the first to indicate Tammany's defection, a decrease of 1000 on Hancock's vote is looked for.

Butler cut out a somewhat important figure in the campaign in the city among the labor organizations, but the recent expose tending to connect him with Blaine has weakened his position, and workingmen will throw him overboard. Butler's vote will be so small in New York state as practically to shut him out. He will get 7000 votes, outside [illegible] and is out of the race.

The republicans of the city are gaining fresh accessions to their party daily from first-time voters, while their executive and financial ability at national headquarters in town is superior, in every way, to that of the democratic managers. It cannot be questioned but that the leaders of the rival democratic factions in New York city, Kelly and Thompson, care more for retaining control of the city patronage than for national supremacy of the country. The democrats would make a deal with the republican leaders to-morrow if thereby they could further their own interests. This condition of affairs gives renewed confidence to Blaine's adherents.

Cleveland will probably carry Brooklyn by 12,000. BLAKE.

BLAINE IN BROOKLYN.

He is Given a Reception by the Ladies—Rain Interferes with the Parade.

NEW YORK, Oct 30.—Blaine went to Brooklyn this afternoon to attend a reception and mass meeting there, and to review the parade. The flags of the city were hoisted on the city hall, municipal buildings, and many private residences. Blaine went first to the Mansion house, where an informal reception was held, and hundreds of persons were presented to him.

A RECEPTION BY BROOKLYN LADIES.

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—Blaine was given a reception by ladies of Brooklyn, at the Academy of Music, this afternoon. In response to an address delivered by Rev. Dr. Behrens, on behalf of the ladies, Blaine said:

In the important national contest, which now draws to a close, much of the progress of which I have personally witnessed, two things have especially impressed me—the influence exerted by the women of the United States, and that exerted by the young men [applause], and I do not know that I ought to divide these, for I attribute the great interest and activity of the young men largely to the influence of their mothers. [Applause.] The republican party owes a great debt to the women of the United States [renewed applause], not a debt now maturing, but one which began in the very foundation of the party, for literature which sprang from the pen of women did much, I was about to say did most, to concentrate that great army of freedom which in the conflict that came upon the country, destroyed the institution of slavery. [Great cheering.] And I am sure that when the news came to me that I was selected for the important and responsible position in which I now stand, I received no greeting that meant more or was more grateful to me than one which came to me from that lady whose gifted pen imparted spirit and soul to anti-slavery agitation, when she gave to the world "Uncle Tom's Cabin." [Prolonged applause and three cheers for Harriet Beecher Stowe.]

WOMAN'S INFLUENCE.

I do not feel, therefore, that the ladies of Brooklyn are taking any strange step in this extraordinary welcome which my grateful heart feels it impossible to respond to adequately in words. I do not feel that they are taking any new step or exerting any other influence than that which has been constantly exerted by women during thirty of the most important years in the history of the United States in which the republican party has led national progress. [Renewed cheering.] I know the widespread influence that goes out from such a greeting as this. I know that, without suffrage, woman casts often the weightiest vote. [Applause.] I know that great moral strength, showing itself constantly in the political strength with which the republican party has been inspired for its struggles and its triumphs, has come from the gracious and pure influence of woman. [Great cheering.] I make, therefore, due and profound acknowledgment, not merely for the great significance of the occasion, but for its cordiality and for whatever of personal compliment it may imply; but I should be vain, indeed, if I should take to myself any great part of that which means only an expression of sympathy and support in that great commanding contest in which, for the time, I am called to represent the best patriotism, the best heart and the best aspirations of the American republic.

MEETING AT THE ACADEMY.

After the ladies' reception Blaine was driven to the residence of S. V. White, where he dined. Other guests included John Sherman, ex-secretary of the treasury, Rev. Edward Beecher and Mayor Low.

In the evening Brooklyn academy was tastefully decorated. The meeting was under the auspices of the Kings county campaign club. Hon. A. W. Tenney was elected president. The vice presidents included Rev. Edward Beecher, David S. Babcock, Patrick Ford, General B. F. Tracy, Rev. F. A. Farley and Rev. S. T. Spear.

At 7:45 General Fremont entered the hall and received quite an ovation which he acknowledged in a few remarks. He was followed by Blaine, who said:

As I am to be followed by my distinguished friend, Senator Sherman of Ohio [applause], in a speech, I take it as my only duty of the evening to furnish the text, and that the text shall be a brief summary of the effects that are to follow from the continuance of the republican party in power. What is to be assured? What is to be held firm?

I begin with the currency system of the United States which was brought back to par with gold by my distinguished friend, then eminent secretary of the treasury, will be held at that point.

[illegible]—That the system of duties, which affords encouragement and protection alike to the laborer and the capitalist in the United States will be maintained. [Applause.]

Third—The just system of settlement in public lands. [Renewed applause.] And the conservation of these lands for the benefit of actual settlers will be upheld. [Great applause.]

Fourth—That the munificent and magnificent system of pensions, which has rewarded the [illegible] and valor of our soldiers will be [illegible].

CIVIL SERVICE REFORM.

[illegible] the service of the United States will be continued and further developed as experience [illegible] that the republican party without speaking or intending to speak invidiously of any other party in the United States, past or present, is the only one that ever had resolution and courage to limit its own political power. [Tremendous applause.] The republican party did not gain power by a struggle for reform in the civil service, but, with the possession of patronage larger and grander than imperial sway ever controlled, the party voluntarily abandoned [illegible] the great reform with its own ranks, an achievement without parallel in the history of political [illegible]. [Applause.] All this has been accomplished is but a foreshadowing of that which more enlarged experience and further trial shall demonstrate to be wise, patriotic and effective. And lastly, those great amendments to the constitution which are monuments of what was gained by the war—emancipation of the slave, [great applause] declaration and definition of the right of citizenship, guaranty of national credit, by organic enactment and that liberal basis of suffrage which forbids that it should stop at any line of color—all these will be maintained with patriotic fidelity. [Prolonged applause.]

AT THE OPERA HOUSE.

From the Academy of Music Blaine and General Fremont were driven to the Grand Opera house, where there was another great crowd outside and a very large audience inside. Upon Blaine's appearance there was a repetition, on a smaller scale, of the scene at the Academy of Music. Being introduced by the chairman of the evening, Blaine delivered the following speech:

The republican party had its origin in a combination of patriotic men thirty years ago, to prevent the introduction of slavery into the territories of the United States. That battle was waged with persistence and courage and resisted with a spirit of evil determination, that finally culminated in the election of Abraham Lincoln [cheers] and resistance to his constitutional right to be president, that ended in a bloody war of four years duration. A party which began its existence by resisting slavery naturally and inevitably became the protector of free labor [great cheering], and with the question of slavery definitely ended, by the issue of the civil struggle, the party became the representative, the embodiment, of that industrial system which had for its end and its aim encouragement of American industry. [Enthusiastic cheering.] The step from relieving the black man from slave labor was natural and easy, to relieving the white man from the degradation of that form of labor which reduces him to the servitude of poverty. [Renewed cheering.] Standing here, as years as advocates of the protective tariff, [cheers] the results have been a great enlargement of our industrial activity, an addition to our national wealth, encouragement and development of American manufactures, and elevation and better payment of every man who earns his bread by the sweat of his face. [Great cheering.]

SHALL THERE BE A CHANGE?

Thirty years of effort and twenty four years of power has certainly vindicated the claims of the republican party to general and to national confidence [cheers], and the leading question now to be decided by popular vote in all the states, is whether that industrial system, that financial system which go hand in hand shall be superseded; whether the experiment of free trade with a possible change in our currency system shall be resorted to by the voluntary consent of the American people. [Never, never.] Certainly there is no man intelligent enough to look at his week's wages on Saturday night who does not know that the only difference between the day's pay for labor in the United States and the day's pay for labor in the British isles is that which is produced and results from the protective tariff. [Great and prolonged cheering.] So that the American laborer or mechanic who voluntarily casts his ballot for elevation to power of a party committed to free trade casts his ballot for a reduction of his own wages. [Cheers.] Trades unions may protect you from unjust exactions of an employer, but how, in an era of free trade, can it protect you from the importation of cheap fabrics from the old world, which must necessarily reduce your own wages, or probably compel the abandonment of rival manufactories in this country?

From the Grand Opera house Blaine was taken to a carriage, and driven to Williamsburg, where he addressed an open air meeting.

After the meeting in Williamsburg, Blaine took his place at the head of a procession. Rain was then falling heavier than ever. As the procession reached republican headquarters on Montague street Blaine took his stand on a platform, and sheltered by a waterproof and umbrella, reviewed the parade, which numbered about 6000 men in uniforms. The ceaseless rain had drenched them through and through and the torches of many were extinguished.

CLEVELAND'S MOVEMENTS.

The Democratic Candidate Makes a Flying Trip Into Connecticut.

ALBANY, N. Y., Oct 30.—Governor Cleveland, accompanied by Private Secretary Lamont and Adjutant General Farnsworth, drove from the executive mansion in a closed carriage shortly before 10 o'clock this morning to the Boston and Albany station, where they took the regular 10 A. M. train for Pittsfield. There was no demonstration of any kind in accordance with Cleveland's expressed desire.

RECEPTION TO GOV. CLEVELAND.

PITTSFIELD, Mass., Oct. 30.—When it was learned this morning that Governor Cleveland would pass through Pittsfield, en route from Albany, an immense crowd of citizens, for miles around, were at the depot to meet him. Governor Cleveland's stay here of half an hour was celebrated by cheering, music and cannonading. Twenty five citizens of New Haven, including Congressman Mitchell, Mayor Lewis and other prominent men, met Governor Cleveland at this place, and the selectmen of the town and the leading democrats were his escort from the cars to the special train on the Housatonic railroad. It was with difficulty that a way was made for him through the throng. He seemed greatly pleased by the reception, which was entirely unexpected. When introduced as the next president his attempt to speak was deafened by cheering of the crowd. He appeared on the platform of the car and bowed his thanks to the enthusiastic crowd. Everybody went through the car shaking him by the hand.

LEAVING CHATHAM.

CHATHAM, Conn., Oct. 30.—Gov. Cleveland was greeted by an immense number of people who crowded to shake him by the hand and to assure him of his final success. The train left the station amid the booming of cannon and cheers of the vast assemblage.

At Great Barrington an immense crowd had assembled. Governor Cleveland appeared on the rear platform and was received with loud cheering. While the train waited hundreds grasped him by the hand, and as it moved away three cheers were given for the "next president of the United States."

AT CANAAN FALLS.

NEW MILFORD, Conn., Oct. 30.—Great crowds gathered at Canaan Falls, a village of West Cornwall, and Kent, and Governor Cleveland appeared on the platform of the car at each station. Crowds gathered to grasp him by the hand. There was great enthusiasm all along the route.

AT BRIDGEPORT.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Oct. 30.—Governor Cleveland arrived in this city by special train on the Housatonic road, at 4:30 P. M., in company with delegates from New Haven and Bridgeport. A crowd of about 2000 gathered at the depot, and a salute of about 100 guns was fired. He was escorted to the Atlantic hotel, where a reception was held until 5:15 P. M., when he left by special train for New Haven. The arrangements are that he will return about 9:30 this evening, and attend a democratic rally at the Barnum rink, after which he takes the special train on the Housatonic road for Albany.

THE RAIN INTERFERES.

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 30.—In this city rain has fallen heavily throughout the day. All arrangements for the day had been completed, but they ended after all in total cancellation. At 10 o'clock this forenoon all idea of the parade had been given up. At the Union depot at [illegible] o'clock crowds began pouring in, and at 5 o'clock over [illegible] persons surged in and out of the depot, awaiting Gov. Cleveland's arrival. Despite the heavy downpour the multitude pressed upon the platform, its denser portions gathering around the train dispatcher's office, and when positive news of Governor Cleveland's arrival in Bridgeport was received, the excitement of the drenched admirers increased. The special train left Bridgeport at [illegible] P. M., but the announcement of this fact was made only to be followed by a bogus telegram stating that bad weather would prevent the governor's arrival at New Haven, but the crowds would not have it thus, and when the special from Bridgeport rolled into the depot some moments before there was a general struggle for positions of advantage. Sober and staid citizens cheered themselves hoarse in the mad rush outside, and on the platforms the crowd was practically beyond control. The enthusiasm was almost frenzied inside. Even the lunch counters were appropriated for standing room, and all the while a number of hacks tore down from the city's center and deposited fresh additions to the distinguished visitor's welcomers.

THE GOVERNOR ALIGHTS.

When the police had hewed a passage-way, Governor Cleveland descended from his train. Cheer after cheer rolled through the depot, and the struggle to get a glimpse of the New York statesman was renewed with enthusiasm. The governor, with Colonel Lamont and General Farnsworth of his staff, was followed to his carriage by ex-Governors Charles R. Ingersoll and James E. English, Mayor [illegible] Robertson, Congressman [illegible] Mitchell, Alexander Troupe and scores of other prominent democrats, and driven immediately to the New Haven house where supper was served.

It was finally decided to hold a reception in the city hall. Here at 7 o'clock the corridors were filled with an audience which has been rare, seen in New Haven. Up the front stair cases the crowds passed, and the committee in charge could hardly keep back the surging tide of enthusiastic humanity.

In a few moments the familiar face of New York's governor was seen on the staircase, and the cheers which went up were deafening. From the first floor to the vaulted roof a cry of welcome broke forth again and again. The governor immediately stepped in front of the mayor's office, when the crowds pressed forward in the right corridor, and were marshaled, one by one, past the visitor. Some of them were allowed to press his hand. Some were so anxious to get a chance to greet the governor that order could not be enforced for some time, and it was only when a squad of police arrived that handshaking was made comparatively easy.

THE TORTURE ENDED.

At 8:30 the torture ceased and the governor, his forehead covered with perspiration, was dragged into the mayor's office and allowed to sit down. He complained of the strain to which he had been subjected. "My arm," he said, with a smile, "is stiff from this cordial hand shaking. I will certainly carry away with me a good opinion of New Haven's strength. If you democrats vote like you shake hands there can be no resisting you." Brief introductions followed, Mayor Lewis doing the honors of his office. When the city hall was comparatively cleared, the band, which had been playing at frequent intervals, formed in front of the building and hundreds of citizens, despite the rain and mud, formed an impromptu escort to attend Cleveland on his way to the Bridgeport train.

A BRIDGEPORT AGAIN.

BRIDGEPORT, Oct. 30.—Gov. Cleveland returned here from New Haven at about 9 o'clock and was at once escorted to the Atlantic house by Chairman W. H. Barnum, where a rest of nearly an hour was taken. Notwithstanding a severe northeast storm, a crowd of 700 accompanied the governor to the hotel. A large gathering had assembled in Recreation hall, long before Cleveland's arrival in the city, and was addressed by local speakers.

Shortly before 10 Governor Cleveland and party appeared upon the stage, and amid immense enthusiasm Cleveland was introduced by Bernard Keating, president of the meeting. Gov. Cleveland said:

I cannot forbear at such a time as this to express the pleasure I experience in this sincere and heartfelt welcome that the people of New Haven, Bridgeport and the state of Connecticut have offered me. If this welcome was a tribute to me as an individual, I could only express my gratitude, but when I find that it represents an idea that is the same with you as with me, it is with a sense of solemn responsibility that I stand before you. [Cheers.] The world has not before produced so grand a spectacle—a nation of freemen determining its own course in that position you are to-night. [Applause.] At such time a candidate stands in a solemn position and the pleasure of his hearers only serve to increase the feeling of responsibility that is his, is true to his country and to the best interests of the people, which should pervade his thoughts.

THE REPUBLICAN PARTY.

A survey of the field of the contest sees forces drawn up in array against you from a party strong in numbers, and flanked by a vast army of officeholders, long in power, rich in resources, both of money and influence, but corrupt to the core. To-day they seek to control the religious element of your country; to-morrow they will endeavor to gain the interest of you millionaire magnates for the purpose of raising money to carry on their campaign. There should be no mistake about this contest; it is an attempt to break down the barriers between the people of the United States and those that rule them. The people are bound down by a class of officeholders whose business it is to make money out of their positions. If you were to go on forever choosing your rulers from this class, what will be the end? This is a question every one of you can answer for himself. Because it is the party of the people, thousands are flocking to our standard, for their love their fellow-countrymen and their country more than they do their party. Let us feel that the people are rulers of this nation and not the officeholders, whose sole ambition and purpose is private gain. [Applause.] Let us also feel that if the people give us power to govern we have a sacred trust.

Cheer after cheer followed Mr. Cleveland's speech. The audience rose to their feet in a body and hats were thrown into the air, and the galleries, which were filled with ladies, were a mass of waving handkerchiefs, and it was fully ten minutes before Mr. McSweeney, the Irish suspect, who made the concluding speech of the evening, could be introduced.

After the meeting Cleveland took the train for Albany.

CONNECTICUT.

The State Claimed by both Parties—Republicans Confident of Success.

HARTFORD, Conn., Oct. 30.—[Special.]—Democratic managers are making extravagant claims of their ability to carry Connecticut for Cleveland. The chairman of their state central committee places the figures at [illegible]000. The republicans are not boasting much, but are doing effective work. A member of the republican state committee said yesterday that the prospects were that Blaine would carry the state by 2500. This is close figuring on an estimated total vote of 140,000, and is about the same as Garfield's plurality four years ago. He also predicted the success of the state ticket, and that there would be little difference between the vote on this and on the national ticket. Some independent republicans would vote the state ticket, although voting against Blaine, and many Irishmen would support Blaine who would vote the democratic state ticket. The legislature is safe for the republicans, assuring the election of a republican United States senator next spring. The state committee has never known the prospects of the party to brighten so rapidly as during the last week. The situation is vastly more encouraging than at the corresponding time four years ago. He scouted the idea that the independents will poll 5000 votes, as the democratic managers are claiming. The independents themselves do not pretend to give any figures, and their canvass is faulty, many being classed as independents who are thoroughly republicans, and others who have never been anything but democrats.

General Hawley is confident that Blaine will carry Connecticut by a plurality equal to that of Garfield in 1880. He said to-day that he had made no figures, and he had heard of none that he regarded as definite on either side, but in every section of the state he had visited he had heard of gains on Garfield's vote. The independent vote, in his opinion, was falling away, and Connecticut would place herself in the republican column on the only issue which is of real interest here, the protective tariff.

POLITICAL POINTS.

HENDRICKS SPEAKS AT HIS HOME.

INDIANAPOLIS, Oct. 30.—Governor Hendricks, in accordance with his usual custom in election years to address the democracy of Shelbyville, his old home, in the last week of the campaign, spoke here this afternoon. He had been engaged for a barbecue September 25, but canceled it to visit Columbus, much to the regret of his old constituencies. The meeting to-day was attended by over 3000 people. In his speech he counseled the democracy of Shelby county to close up their divided ranks and sustain him once more by their suffrages, as they had in the past. He told the people he wanted their votes, although some dudes had charged it was not proper for him to ask for votes. The speech proper, was devoted to three propositions, viz: that the tariff should be limited to the needs of the government; that the republican party by [illegible] policy, had [illegible] our carrying trade from [illegible] reducing it from 85 to 15 per cent, and that the surplus in the treasury should be [illegible].

Upon the tariff he said: "In their platform the republicans assure the country that they will remedy inequalities in the tariff system and [illegible] excesses. Is not that an admission that the tariff laws of this country are not equal and that taxation is unequal upon the people; that upon one man taxation is higher, heavier and harder than it is upon another? I think so. What have they been doing in the nineteen years that have passed by since the close of the war, and the republican party has been all the while in power? Why is it they have to come before the people and admit that the revenue system is not equal and just? Why is it that they have to admit that there is an excess collected, through the instrumentality of the revenue laws? How much shall the people be taxed? The answer is a plain one. Taxation shall equal, but not exceed the wants of the government economically administered. That is what President Arthur said two years ago. It is what the democratic convention said July last, at Chicago."

Senator Williams of Kentucky followed Hendricks, and Judge McCampbell of Illinois spoke to-night.

MARIA HALPIN SCORES CLEVELAND.

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—[Special.]—The efforts of Gov. Cleveland's friends to defame Maria Halpin and to surround her name with scandal more vile even than that which is attached to her through her association with Mr. Cleveland, have at last brought from Mrs. Halpin the first word she has spoken in her defense. A series of affidavits were made public last night, which show that Maria Halpin is not the bad and designing woman she has been pictured by her democratic villifiers, and that while Mr. Cleveland has been shouting, "Tell the truth" to an investigating committee, his friends have not even stopped at perjury in trying to suppress it. Mrs. Halpin's affidavit was made voluntarily and without suggestion from outside sources. Soon after reading Henry Ward Beecher's defense of Mr. Cleveland and his slanderous attacks on the life she led prior to and since her acquaintance with Mr. Cleveland, she sent for her son and announced her intention of defending her womanhood and her family. Acting under his advice, she made a statement under oath, in which she declares that her troubles were unknown to her friends until they were made public a few months ago; that her reputation was above reproach until she met Gov. Cleveland in Buffalo; that the circumstances of her ruin by Cleveland are too revolting to be made public, and that there is not and never was a doubt in regard to the paternity of the child born to her and Cleveland.

THE BUSINESS MEN'S PARADE.

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—[Special.]—The Tribune editorial says: "There cannot be two honest opinions about the business men's parade. Every one who saw it must admit, if he speaks truthfully, that it was the most significant demonstration of the kind which ever took place in this city. In numbers, it was three times as large as the democratic parade of last Saturday, and the crowds which lined Broadway from Battery to Madison square, to greet it with continuous cheers, were tremendous. Its quality was also superior. All the business interests and the great trades of the city were represented by their leading men, and the size of each delegation was remarkable. The enthusiasm of the citizens in line, as well as that of the spectators, was astonishing, and all this despite rain, which fell heavily."

THE MINISTERS CALL ON BLAINE.

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—[Special.]—A Tribune editorial says: "The visit paid to Blaine yesterday by ministers of the country is an incident unparalleled in the history of political canvasses. Representatives of the Presbyterian, Congregational, Baptist and Methodist churches, united with Catholic priests, Jewish rabbis, Quaker preachers and colored ministers from the south, in extending to the republican candidate assurance of their sympathy and support. When one thousand clergymen take part in a demonstration so emphatic and significant, the fact must arrest the attention not only of the public here but of the people of the whole country."

THE BEECHER-JOY MATTER.

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—[Special.]—The Tribune's special from Washington says: Ex-Senator Pomeroy was asked to-night by your correspondent if he had anything to say about the Beecher-Joy matter. He said: "Beecher has used my name, evidently because no other happened to occur to him at the time. Such use was entirely gratuitous. I have no knowledge whatever of the alleged transaction and I wish to make my denial as broad, comprehensive and emphatic as possible. I have known Joy for many years as an upright man, and a more upright man never lived. He is incapable of telling a falsehood. His reputation for honor, integrity and trustworthiness is known wherever he is known."

LOGAN IN ILLINOIS.

BELLEVILLE, Ills., Oct. 30.—General Logan spent most of the day at the residence of John L. Thomas, where he received a large number of calls. In the afternoon he made a brief address in the public square. The tariff was the principal feature discussed. He said the democratic party was doing everything possible to break up American industries and pauperize American labor. Democratic success, he said, meant free trade. He presented statistics in connection with his arguments. He left for Indiana to-night. He will reach Indianapolis in the morning, and will place himself in the hands of the republican committee till the night before election.

BLAINE TO VISIT BOSTON.

BOSTON, Oct. 30.—Colonel Whipple, who went to New York to invite Blaine to Boston, telegraphs that the republican presidential candidate has consented to accept the hospitality of the republicans of this city on Monday. Elaborate preparations will be made for the reception. The parade, which was to have taken place to-night, has been postponed until Monday, when Blaine will review it.

CRIMINAL CALENDAR.

A DETERMINED SUICIDE.

[illegible], N. H., Oct. 30.—On Tuesday evening Horace Dean of Brookfield, aged 18 years, chained himself to a brush heap near his father's house, then set the brush on fire and deliberately burned himself to death. His body was discovered this morning. A gash was found on the side of his throat, made by a razor, which was discovered near by. A note was found, directed to his parents, saying he was tired of living. He gave no excuse for the act, but it is thought it was caused by unrequited love.

MURDERS HIS WIFE AND SISTER-IN-LAW.

TALLULAH, Ga., Oct. 30.—[Special.]—Eugene Beck returned home this afternoon and began to quarrel with his wife. He drew a revolver and emptied five charges into her heart and head. The woman dropped dead. Miss Addie Bailey, his sister-in-law, who was in an adjoining room, rushed out, when the remaining charge from his revolver was emptied into her heart. The drunken wretch then laid down in a stupor, fell asleep and was awakened by officers who arrested him. It is feared he will be lynched, as the jail is insecure.

SHOT INTO A CROWD.

VINCENNES, Ind., Oct. 30.—Lincoln Keith, who was shot in the head by Dick Adkinson, at Edwardsport in this county, last night, has since died. Adkinson rushed out of the saloon greatly excited and said he was going to kill some d——d democrat, as a democratic rally was being held there, and shot into a crowd of bystanders with the above result. Adkinson was arrested. The feeling is intense, and it is feared a mob may lynch him.

A GANG OF CATTLE THIEVES LYNCHED.

DENVER, Oct. 30.—Rumors have reached here of the lynching by vigilantes of a gang of seventeen cattle thieves captured while in camp on Ross creek in the Gore range of mountains, twenty miles west of Georgetown. No particulars are at present obtainable. The report is thought to be exaggerated.

FIRED UPON BY MASKED MEN.

SOCORRO, N. M., Oct. 30.—The passenger train this evening, while nearing Escondida, four miles north of here, on the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe road, was fired into by a band of masked men. One woman is reported shot. The town is up in arms. Sheriff Simpson and fifty armed men are just starting in pursuit.

THE SCIENTIFIC BUREAUS.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—The joint commission appointed shortly before the adjournment of congress to inquire into the organization and work of the coast and geodetic surveys, the signal service and the hydrographic office, will probably meet in this city November 11. During recess the members of the commission have been collecting opinions of scientific gentlemen and heads of various bureaus interested in the subject under consideration. The national academy of sciences was asked to consider the subject, and requested to furnish a report to the commission upon its reassembling in November. That body referred the matter to a committee, of which General Meigs was chairman. The committee has completed its report, but will not make it public until it has been given to the commission. It is understood the report recommends radical changes. A number of members of the academy have given free expression to their opinion on the work and organization of the bureaus. They favor the establishment of a new government department, to embrace all bureaus of a scientific nature. This would include the signal service, the hydrographic office, the coast and geodetic surveys, the lighthouse board, naval observatory and army engineers' work in the matter of improvement of rivers and harbors.

RAILROAD NOTES.

THE ATLANTIC AND PACIFIC'S SHARE.

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—[Special.]—The position of the Atlantic and Pacific on Pacific business is thus described by Boston parties: The Atlantic and Pacific line receives [illegible] per cent of all gross traffic on Pacific railroads west of El Paso, Ogden and Albuquerque, and about 46 per cent of all through continental business, which last year amounted to $11,000,000 gross. If the roads in the far western pool—the Southern Pacific, the Atlantic and Pacific and the Central Pacific—receive 46 per cent. of this gross transcontinental traffic, or $5,060,000, and the Atlantic and Pacific line has 27 per cent. of this, or $1,366,200, its own line of 817 miles to Mojave will receive $817,14[illegible], its proportion of the distance to San Francisco.

BECOME TRAFFIC MANAGER.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 30.—It is understood in railroad circles that G. W. Ristine of the Transcontinental association is soon to become traffic manager of the Atlantic and Pacific, and will have charge of the fast freight line of the Atlantic and Pacific, the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe and the St. Louis and San Francisco roads.

FRIDAY MORNING, OCTOBER 31, 1884

[illegible] Englishmen [illegible] speak [illegible] its institutions [illegible] But on the other hand there [illegible] of Americans to criticise the English [illegible] in America, which is not [illegible] The Englishman [illegible] so long as he sojourns in America, simply feels himself away from home and regrets it; he looks forward always to the time when he shall have made money enough out of a people whom he holds in contempt, so that he may take his leave of them and return to his natural associations of snob aristocracy under the British crown. But so long as he stays in America he remains faithful always to British ideas and British interests and hence wherever you find him at this time he is an active supporter of the so-called democratic party of the United States, and is working with earnest intent for the presidential candidate whose election he supposes would be beneficial to English interests. Undoubtedly there are citizens of the United States of English birth or English descent who are not taking this course but they have become American citizens in fact while the other sort, even though they may have taken the vows of American citizenship, have done so merely in a nominal and formal way, as if stooping disdainfully to a position not worthy of their royal [illegible]

Such men in all parts of the United States are shouting lustily [illegible] Here in Portland as in New York, they have become the most earnest supporters of the democratic party, their partisan opinions are obtruded in a style of characteristic offensiveness showing at once how little they think of Americans, and how far out of their own proper element they are when they have no titled nobility to fawn upon. It is the same description of men who, both in England and America, were ardent supporters of the rebellion of the southern free trade slaveholders. Their conduct in politics now is marked as it was then. They are merely seeking to promote the interests of England and to this end they are on the alert for every opportunity. They wanted the country broken into fragments by the rebellion. That failed and disappointment made them quiet for a time, but now having persuaded themselves that the next best thing would be the defeat of the man who represents American ideas, American interests and American policy, and the election of the man who would be favorable to English policy and English trade, they have become active in American politics again. This is the key to the struggle in New York; it is the key to the partisanship of the English residents of Portland. It is the key, too, to the anxiety of the English press about our presidential election. It explains the comments of the London Times and the London Standard; it shows what the Pall Mall Gazette means when it calls upon Englishmen to take note that "the dominant party in the United States has selected as its candidate for the presidency the one statesman who is pledged up to the hilt to a forward policy," whose nomination was "the most notable event, as far as the British empire is concerned, that has happened on the other side of the Atlantic since Lincoln was assassinated," whose "views as to the destiny and duty of the United States in the western world concern us nearly," and who if elected "would regard it as his chief object to promote a great American confederacy under the aegis of the government at Washington which would tend to increase the export trade of the United States at the expense of that of Great Britain." We call attention to this entire article, published in another column. It gives the key to the present political action of the British residents of the United States, and shows why the English colony in Portland, with all the rest, is taking more interest now in American political affairs than Englishmen have ever taken since the suppression of the rebellion.

NEVADA AND HENDRICKS.

It is fairly possible that Nevada may decide the election. If to the solid south be added New York, New Jersey and Nevada, the total will be 201 votes—exactly the number necessary to elect.

Nevada, in the days of its prosperity was a republican state. It was the seat of activity and enterprise, and hence was in political sympathy with the bustling republican states of the north. But when blight and decay overtook it republican strength began to diminish and democratic strength to increase, and now, since the state has sunk to the condition of inactivity and utter decay that marks the democratic states of the south, Nevada has become almost as surely democratic as they. We look to see its vote go to Cleveland and Hendricks.

Mention of the name of Hendricks here reminds us that Hendricks was the main, though indirect, instrument in causing the admission of Nevada as a state. The old copperhead had come into the senate, reinforced by others like himself who owed their election to the depression produced by national defeats in the great battles of 1862 and Hendricks and his colleagues were rendering so much aid and comfort to the rebellion and doing so much to embarrass the prosecution of the war, that it became absolutely necessary to strengthen the union and national cause in the senate. Two more union men in the senate would help the national cause very much, and so Nevada was admitted. Otherwise it would have remained a territory, as in fact it ought. Hendricks went into the senate in 1863. Nevada was admitted in 1864, expressly to secure two additional senators on the union side to help the national cause against such men as Hendricks of Indiana, Buckalew of Pennsylvania, McDougall of California, Powell of Kentucky and Richardson of Illinois.

But for the rebel victories in the field in 1862, followed by the oppression and gloom throughout the north that enabled rebel sympathizers and supporters in large numbers to get into the two houses of congress, Nevada would never have been admitted as a state.

True to his political character, which had made it necessary to take into the senate two union men from a desert territory to aid in holding copperhead and rebel schemes in check, Hendricks voted right along against all measures for suppression of the rebellion, and threw all possible obstacles in the way of the prosecution of the war. He opposed and voted against all the great tax measures to raise money for the war; one of the 6th of June, 1864, another on the 17th of June of the same year. He also spoke and voted against the act for enrollment of men for the military service, passed in February 1864. This bill, the source through which the armies were recruited, Hendricks fought at every stage. With equal ardor he opposed the employment of colored troops, and was unrelenting in his hostility to the anti-slavery policy of the country; voted against the amendment to abolish slavery, and antagonized the measures of the administration at every stage. He was of far greater service to the rebellion than Breckinridge was, who left the senate to command a rebel army, or than Hendricks himself could possibly have been had he done the same thing.

We do not believe that this old copperhead will ever be vice president of the United States.

Mark Twain's latest joke was to preside at a democratic meeting in Hartford. Four years ago Mark presided at a similar meeting and after the election said: "We are but mortal, we are but sparrows, and shall live to do many unwise things yet, but the next time anybody beguiles us with a tariff for revenue only he will have to get up at a particularly early hour in the morning." It is quite evident that the humorist remained in bed too long again.

Henry Ward Beecher, called to the witness stand as an expert in adultery, continues his testimony day after day in behalf of the "lecherous [illegible]."

[illegible] whether [illegible] men [illegible] at their houses for something to eat. It is best, some may think, to give the supplicant food, thus the energy of the donor, whether he is serving or not, and tell at once to his importunity. This is easy, and is usually regarded as a safe way of getting rid of [illegible] and at the same time disposing of an unwelcome [illegible]. It is the indolent man's easy way of disposing of every vexatious problem. But we have a duty to society at large which cannot be thus easily discharged. It is true that the times are now hard, but the hard times have thus far laid their hands most lightly on those who serve for wages. The pay of the day laborer has not been materially reduced in any part of the country, and mechanics of nearly all the trades are still receiving nearly the same wages as a year ago. Food and clothing of all kinds are remarkably cheap. Not for many years have the requirements of life's absolute necessities been offered at so low a price. In New York city, according to a leading paper published there, flour can now be bought for less than half the price for which it sold seven years ago. "Wheat, then selling at $1 55, and a little while before at over $2 a bushel, is now offered at 90 cents a bushel. Coffee, which then sold at 19½ cents, can now be had at 10½ cents per pound. Tea, which then brought 50, is now on the market at 28 cents a pound. Brown sugar, then costing over 8 cents a pound, can now be bought at less than 5 cents a pound; white sugar, then 10½ cents, now 6¾ cents. Rice, then 7 cents, now 5½ to 6 cents a pound. Less than eighteen months ago mess pork was $20, now to be had at $17; mess beef at $14, now $11; lard, 12 cents, now 8; butter, 31 cents, now 30 (owing to the drouth at the east); cheese, then 13 cents, now 11½ cents a pound. The prices of clothing have declined still more. Cloths, blankets, flannels and cotton goods are now at the lowest point they have ever reached in human history. A whole suit of clothes for a man can now be bought in New York for two or three days' wages, and the price of a day's washing will buy the washerwoman a new gown with a pair of stockings thrown into the bargain." Prices for the necessaries of life are not much higher here than in the eastern cities. Some things are higher, but others are lower. Wholesome food upon the table, a fire in the stove, decent raiment by day and warm covering at night can all be provided at a cost remarkably low as compared with frontier prices at any time during the past twenty years.

It is true that there are fewer opportunities for employment at high wages than there were last year. The demand for service will fall off still more during the winter. But the only thing for the unemployed to do is to accept the best opportunities they can find and fill them so well they will be able to hold them. In times of depression in business when the labor market is glutted, men are too much inclined to hang around the street corners, or sit on the dock, or haunt the saloons, or remain idle or sullen in their homes, rather than seek employment at such wages as they are able to get, and which will prove in almost all instances sufficient for the necessaries of life. If they are sick, or have sickness in their families, they may need assistance, and if their needs are known they will in some way be supplied. But it may be regarded as a rule which has almost no exceptions, that an able-bodied man is under no necessity of begging either food or raiment. If he has been reduced to this necessity it is through his own fault or folly, because of his vice or improvidence and, therefore, to give him alms will result in strengthening him in vice or confirming him in his improvident habits, and thus add a new recruit to the army of thriftless and dissipated men who become, through the easy indulgence of good-natured people, a sort of perpetual entail upon society, or rather, we should say, upon that portion of society which is least able to bear the burden.

For this improvident class of persons most naturally calls upon the people who, in a country where grades of society are recognized, are called the "middle classes," because those people are more closely in sympathy with the destitute, and to their credit, it must be said are most inclined to give them help. "A fellow feeling makes them wondrous kind." But these middle classes are least able to bear this burden, because they are the ones who suffer most seriously from the suspension of the machinery of production and the stagnation of general trade. They are the trade people, small manufacturers, merchants doing only a moderate business, or professional men with a limited practice and a somewhat irregular clientage, or the people who in some way are dependent for a livelihood upon the public patronage. These people really suffer more when the pinch of poverty comes than the day laborers, because they find it much more trying and difficult to confine their expenses to the necessaries of life. Not having been content with food and raiment simply, according to the scriptural injunction, but on the other hand having lived fully up to their income or beyond it, they find themselves without a nest-egg of surplus, saved by frugality, to draw from until the return of better times, and they have too much pride to accept the situation and conform their style of living to circumstances.

These people, as well as day laborers, should look the facts squarely in the face when their resources begin to fail, and ask themselves how much of the week's or month's wages goes out for the mere necessaries of life. It is not only an aid to economy but an aid to honesty as well, for all persons, of limited means especially, to keep an exact and itemized account of their household, or if boarding, of their personal expenses. Many live beyond their means without knowing it always, or without knowing how they run needlessly behind their income until a crisis comes and others for the mere sake of keeping up appearances, recklessly pay out money which is not their own when they ought to wait on themselves and do their own work until such time as they can earn enough to be freed from the drudgeries of manual labor. If these homely truths were gracefully accepted and acted upon the burden of many homes would be greatly lightened and the degradation of tramp life would be avoided. There are a great many things in this world of which Diogenes, like a wise philosopher, acknowledged that he had no need. And the necessaries of life for every one may be summed up in a moderate catalogue if the will only gives its consent to the proper self-denial and people realize that only those who live honestly live well. There is an old Latin proverb that no one should live regardless of the future. Shakespeare has expressed the same idea in a more impressive form because he connects the virtue of providence and thrift with the source in which all right motives originate. "Sure He who made us with such large discourse, looking before and after, gave us not that capability and godlike reason to fust in us unused."

A Connecticut jury recently found a man guilty of murder in the second degree for killing the man who had been criminally intimate with his wife. The Springfield Republican, commenting on the verdict, says: "Of course no seduction, least of all that of a married woman, can be an excuse for murder, and it is a healthy sign when juries assert this principle." In England murder as a redress for domestic wrong is not treated with the leniency it has been in America, and for this reason such murders seldom occur. The Englishman prefers to go to the courts and ask for divorce and damages rather than go to the courts as a murderer with the certainty of going to the scaffold. The English practice is more in accordance with civilization than ours has been.

There is a co-operative society in England which has attained a remarkable success. Beginning business in 1864 with a capital of $4995, it had in 1882 a loan capital alone of over $2,000,000. Fifty local stores combined to start it, and in June, 1884, it had as associates, or partners, 678 local co-operative societies with a [illegible] members [illegible] $[illegible] [illegible] to the time [illegible],000 00. It has paid out up to [illegible] as bonus to purchasers, interest on [illegible] on deposits, the sum of $8,05[illegible] value of its realty and fixtures is $1,[illegible] been [illegible] two [illegible] purchasing [illegible] The New York [illegible] business in 1863 the [illegible] The principal societies are in Manchester and there are branches in London and Newcastle.

We want [illegible] to examine the books," cry the democratic organs. What has your party been doing that it has not examined the books heretofore? The house of representatives has been democratic, with the exception of a single term of congress, during the last ten years, and for a portion of that period both senate and house have been democratic. It has, therefore, been in the power of the democratic party to "get a look at the books" at any time, and as it still has the house of representatives that power is in its hands still. And, in fact, the power has been repeatedly exercised during the last ten years. Democratic committees have given all departments an overhauling, and the pretense that there is concealed rascality in the bookkeeping which can only be discovered by a change of parties, is uncandid and absurd.

In Sierra Leone, in western Africa, where there are about 60,000 native Africans and only 271 white persons, the farmers number 12,000, the traders 10,000, and the mechanics 2300. The church membership is put at nearly 4[illegible],000 and the school attendance at 8000. They have a postal system in successful operation including a money order bureau and a savings bank and there are also hospitals and asylums, prisons, market houses and numerous public bridges and other evidences of civilization. The missionary work of the country is now mainly in the hands of the natives, and the educational and charitable institutions are under similar control.

Now some of our carping democratic brethren are saying that the Nineteenth Ohio district could not have given 13,997 majority. The remark betrays their ignorance of the banner district of the Western Reserve. It is Garfield's old district, and sometimes gave him 15,000 majority. In 1860 it gave Taylor, who now carries it by 13,997, a majority of 12,678. No party has such a majority in any other district in the United States, except possibly in some of the southern districts, where the shot-gun quells all opposition.

Vermont is a poor agricultural state as compared with many others in this Union. But one man in a small mountain town is sending 250 pounds of butter a week to Atlanta, Georgia, and when there are refrigerator cars on the southern railroads, as there soon will be, the proprietor of a hotel in that city will take 800 pounds of Vermont butter a week. It is not soil alone nor climate, that makes a good state. The people have a good deal to do with it.

When the democratic party gave up the government in 1860 there was no money whatever in the treasury. All efforts to raise money, by the Buchanan administration had failed. The last loan it put on the market was taken only in part, and the securities sold below 90, while the government was forced to pay 12 per cent interest. The democratic party had completely wrecked the government, its credit and all. This information is furnished in response to an inquiry from Independence.

The Toledo (Ohio) Post (published in that district) has recovered sufficiently to remark in trembling tones, "When free trade shows up in the country, district and state (as in Ohio) perhaps it is well enough to inquire if it is worth the powder." And with an earnestness born of deep conviction, the Post adds, "Free trade appears to be an expensive luxury."

This evening the Irish American League which has been carrying on an independent campaign for Blaine and Logan will hold a meeting at Masonic hall, which will be addressed by Hon A. C. Marsh of Vancouver.

"You uns have had it a long time, now let we uns have a show," is the sum of the democratic argument in these last days of the campaign.

THE MORAL ISSUE.

Chicago Tribune.

The democrats and mugwumps seem determined to keep Grover Cleveland's unchastity before the people, probably upon the theory of that immaculate teacher of morality, the New York Evening Post, which said: "Chastity is not the greatest of virtues, and offenses against it have often been consistent with the possession of all the qualities which ennoble human nature, and dignify human life, and make human progress possible." Whatever may be the theory, Cleveland's friends are determined that the issue shall be kept before the people and that good men and women shall not forget that the democratic candidate is unchaste.

It will be remembered that the story of Cleveland's unchastity was placed upon its feet and started on its travels by democrats. It was openly told to members of the democratic national convention by one of the most prominent democrats of New York. It first saw the light in a democratic newspaper published in Cleveland's own city. It appeared with still further amplification in the correspondence of democratic newspapers, and it was not until it had run the democratic gamut that republican newspapers took it up and notified Cleveland that if these charges, made from democratic sources, were untrue he ought to come out and say so. The republican papers made no charges themselves. They only copied those made by democratic papers and called upon him to disprove them. This he failed to do, and meanwhile the mugwump papers came out and apologized for his unchastity, but did not dispute it. Since that time other charges have been made and the republican papers have called upon him to controvert them, but in vain.

Not content with the injury done him by the democrats, now comes Mr Beecher and lugs the impure matter before his mugwump hearers, producing Cleveland's own admission of his guilt, and crowning it with the declaration that he shall stand by him. What is the purpose of all this? Why is it that Cleveland's own friends persist in dragging the "moral issue" before the public and exposing it in all its hideousness? Why is it that they are condoning and apologizing for it on the one hand and sustaining it on the other? Do they expect that by constant iteration people will become accustomed to it and close their eyes to its enormity, and perhaps after a while conclude with the Evening Post that unchastity is consistent with the possession of all the qualities which ennoble human nature? If so, they are making a serious mistake. As Dr Storrs said, "the suggestion that a man whose history is stained with admitted licentiousness may yet properly and deliberately be put at the head of the nation must certainly be scouted. Forgiveness is one thing. Popular coronation is quite another." They should remember that there is no dispute as to the truth or falsity of the charges. Mrs Beecher herself has induced Cleveland to admit that they are true. The only question now is Dr Storrs' suggestion that his unchastity does not deserve "popular coronation." If the friends of Cleveland think that the people are going to rise up and crown his profligacy by giving him the highest office in the land, or if Mr Beecher thinks that the people are going to sustain unchastity because he has sanctioned it in Cleveland's case and practiced it in his own case, they will find themselves mistaken. Now that the guilt is self-confessed, their best course is to preserve a discreet silence, and to cease than attempt to make a "moral issue" of it.

The British Campaign.

[illegible] London Standard.

It is not strange that the opinion of a London journal as to the character of the republican candidate is shaped by the utterances of the free-trade journals on this side. The difficulty is that the London Standard does not understand that those journals are not telling the truth.—New York Tribune.

FOR AMERICANS TO READ.

The British Against Blaine, and Why.

[illegible]

[illegible] the republican [illegible] nominated to the American [illegible] greatest Jingo of the western [illegible] when Englishmen are exhorted to follow the American example and dispense with foreign affairs the dominant party in the United States selects as its candidate for the presidency the one statesman who is pledged up to the hilt to a forward policy. He may not have been chosen because of his foreign policy, but it is significant that the great caucus passed a resolution in favor of increasing the navy, and did not regard his aggressive imperialism as any objection to his nomination. The vote of the convention therefore, we take to be a much more notable event, so far as the British empire is concerned, than anything that has happened on the other side of the Atlantic since President Lincoln was assassinated.

It does not matter to us whether Mr Blaine, who in home politics is the Chamberlain of the party machine, as in foreign policy he is the Beaconsfield of the states, is or is not guilty of the numerous jobs of which he is accused by his rivals. His hands may or may not be clean—that is a matter for Americans. But his views as to the destiny and duty of the United States in the western world concern us nearly. We own nearly one-half of the northern continent, we do an immense trade with South America, our treaty obligations in Central America are considerable and the intervening seas are sprinkled with British possessions. On Mr. Blaine's theory of the universe all this is wrong. The old world has no business in the new. Of course he does not propose to drive us out at the point of the bayonet. He is not a lunatic, but a very able and shrewd Yankee. But wherever he can he will oust us from the position which we hold; wherever an opportunity offers he will use it to the uttermost to replace our influence and our trade by the influence and the trade of the United States, and he will regard it as his chief object to promote a great American confederacy under the aegis of the government at Washington, which would tend to increase the export trade of the United States at the expense of that of Great Britain. This is no mere inference from his acts. It is avowed almost in so many words in an article which he published two years ago in a Chicago magazine and it is confirmed by every dispatch which he wrote during his short tenure of office under General Garfield. The grandiose project of the peace congress, at which representatives from all the American states south and north, were to assemble at Washington, was one significant hint as to the direction in which his mind was moving. The abrupt and almost menacing fashion in which he intimated to the English government his disregard for the Clayton-Bulwer treaty was of evil augury for the future relations of the two countries. He lost no opportunity of interfering in Central American disputes, and there were even stories afloat that he was ready to set up a protectorate over some of the largest West Indian islands. But by far the most ominous symptoms of his tendencies was his intervention in Peru, and the grounds on which he defended it. He sent General Hurlbut to intervene in order to save Peru from destruction, expressly because he held it to be the duty of the states to keep Peruvian business out of England's hands. "I especially dislike," he said, "to see England winning great commercial triumphs in a field that legitimately belongs to the United States." Chili's triumph, he thought, was England's victory. American interests demanded intervention to save Peru from the absolute dominion of English influence, and although he declared that he only meant to use "steady moral pressure," his successor promptly reversed his policy on the express ground that it involved the alternative of war.

This being so, we shall do well to watch with extreme solicitude the course of the campaign. That Mr Blaine's views should not have stood in the way of his nomination is very significant. Speaking some weeks before the convention met, Senator Ingalls expressed himself in this remarkable fashion concerning the political tendency of the west:

The people [illegible] continent [illegible] is moving with irresistible [illegible] whole length and breadth [illegible] One of [illegible] the great religion is the unification of the continent. Under this American [illegible] the northern boundary will be the Polar sea, and the southern the Isthmus canal. The ratification of the Mexican treaty was urged by western senators [illegible] inspiration [illegible] The treaty is the first [illegible] nation of that country. [illegible] the American idea is [illegible] continental. [illegible] of American destiny we need a president who is aggressive and comprehensive, not provincial in his scope. I think Blaine comes nearer [illegible] leader than any one [illegible] in our politics to-day [illegible] as being too aggressive.

And yet Mr Blaine who was too aggressive for this senator, who calmly contemplated annexations down to Panama, is to-day the selected candidate of the republican party for the presidency of the United States.

MAY DISCHARGED SOLDIERS VOTE?

PORTLAND, Oct. 30, 1884.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN:

Your answer to the question, "Can a soldier of the United States army vote upon his discharge papers," etc., while correct, will mislead voters. Will you kindly publish, for the information of soldiers having discharge papers, the following:

Sec 2166, U. S. Statutes: "Any alien of the age of 21 years and upward who has enlisted or may enlist in the armies of the United States * * * and has been or may hereafter be honorably discharged shall be admitted to become a citizen of the United States * * * without any previous declaration of intention to become such, and he shall not be required to prove more than one year's residence within the United States previous to his application to become such citizen. * * *"

Under the provisions of the foregoing law an alien soldier having his discharge, having resided in the United States one year, may apply to the court and receive his citizen papers and vote thereon at once.

LOCAL AND GENERAL.

WELL CONSTITUTED VAGRANCY.—The [illegible] of gamblers, pimps and others who [illegible] a [illegible] success in infesting gambling halls, and are [illegible] bawdy houses, do not seem to understand what constitutes the crime of vagrancy. So when they are threatened with arrest if they continue to make themselves conspicuous on the streets before honest people, they retort by exhibiting money or claiming that they are employed about some of these disreputable places, and consequently deem themselves out of the reach of the law. But this is where they make a great mistake. A decision recently given by Police Judge Webb of San Francisco, in regard to this, stated that wealth and employment were not necessarily a bar to a prosecution for vagrancy. The case in point was that of a young man named Miles B. Lodge, Jr., an opium fiend and an associate of prostitutes. The prosecution claimed a conviction on the proof that the accused was a wanderer at late and unusual hours and the associate of bad and dissolute characters. The defense offered in evidence the testimony of two witnesses to prove that he had been soliciting orders for clothing. The prisoner's father, a mining machinery builder and respectable citizen, said he was ready to support his son, who was a youth of genius, having invented a patent collar button. Nevertheless Judge Webb decided that the youth was a vagrant and fined him $50. There are several cases in the city similar to the above, and the police need not hesitate to make arrests for fear of not being able to secure convictions.

NUMEROUS PERSONAL BEQUESTS.—The will of Mrs. Mary Dolan was admitted to probate yesterday. After providing for the payment of all her debts, funeral expenses and expenses of administration, she made the following bequests: To Rev. Father Orth $50, Father O'Dea $50, Father Gibney $50, Father Fierens $200. To Bridget O'Shea, Johanna Brandon and Anna Tierney $100 each, to be used for charitable purposes according to their discretion. To Mary and Annie Ginty, daughters of John Ginty, $100 each. To Mrs. John Ginty all her household furniture. To Frank Tierney, James Tierney and Mary Ann Brandon $50 each. To Ellen Dow of Bangor, Maine, sister of her late husband, $200, and to Charles Dolan, his son, $100. To Timothy Brandon and Michael Tierney $300 each. To Mamie Franey and Aggie Brandon $100 each. The residue of her property is willed to her sister, Ann O'Grady of Belfast, Ireland, and if she is dead to her children, and in case neither she nor her children can be found, it is to go to her executors, Michael Tierney and Timothy Brandon, to be distributed in charity to such necessitous persons as they may deem worthy. The sum of $200 is set apart to provide for the care of the cemetery lot in which she and her husband are buried. This is a very sensible and practical method of providing that their graves are kept green.

OREGON VERSUS VERMONT.—Hon. A. J. Dufur and wife, who have just returned from a visit to their old home in Orange county, Vermont, after an absence of thirty years, report having had a very pleasant trip. They traveled extensively in Wisconsin and southern Illinois, but saw no place which suited them so well as Oregon. Mr. Dufur gives rather a discouraging account of the agricultural prospects of Vermont. He says that he thought he was getting to be quite an old man till he went back there and saw men of from 80 to 90 years toddling around and running farms. The land is worn out and the young men are all "going west." The old farmers there would not allow Mr. Dufur to give their boys any favorable account of the west, saying that they were all going off, and the land was passing into the hands of their hired help of foreign birth. Some one said of Vermont a long time ago, that "it was a good place to emigrate from," and Mr. Dufur appears to have thought so thirty years ago, and now thinks so more than ever. The farm that he sold for $3400 has since been sold for $1600, and would not bring that amount now. In one night passed in Wisconsin Mr. Dufur says he heard more thunder and saw more lightning than during his twenty-five years residence in Oregon.

PUNISHED FOR ENTICING SAILORS TO DESERT.—William Kelly, runner for Marr's sailor boarding house, who was arrested on a charge of enticing sailors to desert and entered a plea of not guilty in the U. S. court yesterday, changed his plea to guilty and was let off with a sentence of one day's imprisonment and costs. When he found that the costs amounted to about $75 he was not so much pleased as he might have been. He will probably pay the costs by lingering in the county jail for a month or so. He will probably be more careful about enticing away sailors in the future. Judge Deady in sentencing him remarked that it was a wonder why the captains of ships, when such fellows came aboard, did not take a handspike and drive them ashore. They had no more business to board a man's ship than they had to enter his house. It is probable however that the captains often wish to have the men enticed away in order that they may forfeit wages due them.

POLICE COURT.—F. H. Harris, the youth who was arrested for stealing albums, made an effort through Counsellor Campbell to have the charge against him dismissed, on the ground that the person injured, i. e., the owner of the books, was in New York and not here to make complaint. Judge Moreland reserved his decision and continued the case another day. It is safe to say, however, that such quibbles as that will not be permitted to defeat justice. Frank Montague, for trespass, was locked up for five days.—Five Chinamen who thought they had a perfect right to block up a sidewalk when a policeman ordered them to move on, acknowledged their mistake to the judge and paid the city $5 each as a peace offering. Another Chinaman who was caught fighting contributed $10. Mike Farrell and Joe Sherman, drunks, were sent below for five days each.

WILL MAKE HER HIS WIFE.—Will J. Sewall and Miss Ida L. Clark, adopted daughter of Fred A. Clark of Mount Tabor, will be married this morning at 10 o'clock, which will cause the dismissal of the charge of seduction against the young man. This honorable settlement of an unfortunate affair was brought about yesterday by a conference between the parents of the two young people. In connection with this case is a real estate transfer filed for record in the county clerk's office, by which young Sewall and his father deed to the former's uncle, George F. Greene, five acres of land in Prettyman's claim for a stated consideration of $2500. It is said the young man has repented of his injustice and will take his share of this money and buy a comfortable little home for himself and wife.

POACHER CONVICTED.—James Cully, an amateur Nimrod, was yesterday arraigned before Justice Greene upon a charge of trespass. There being no objections, the case was tried at once. The complainant was Justice R. E. Bybee, who has rented a shooting preserve for the season on the banks of Columbia slough. Cully was found poaching thereon, notwithstanding the printed and posted notices warning off all trespassers, as the evidence before the court showed. Justice Greene sentenced him to pay a fine of $10 and the costs of the prosecution, which amount to about $15 more. As Poor Richard says, he sleeps to-night with the sad reflection that "he paid too dear for his whistle."

FREE AT LAST.—The indictment against Joseph Bachman for larceny by bailee, for taking, stealing and carrying away $500 belonging to P. Esser, which he had as bailee, was dismissed in the state circuit court yesterday. This was the last indictment hanging over Joseph, and he can now breathe freely and once more stand erect with a brow unclouded. The indictments still lie against Addie Bachman and are a cloud on his title to the promised land. Addie appears to have vanished from human ken, and is probably in the interior of China, or Africa, or Chatham street, doing a land office business insuring people in companies that don't kick.

NOT STOLEN.—It turns out that the ferryboat Albina, No. 2, was not stolen as was supposed. She had been attached by Sheriff Jordan and was in charge of Deputy Doc Howe. He had gone off "to see that man," and the U. S. marshal coming along with a warrant for the arrest of the boat, arrested her, fired up and took her down to Nicolai's wharf. There is not likely to be much in the transaction for any one, as there is a mortgage on her for $8,200. The Willamette Iron Works have a claim against the boat also, but by the time the mortgage is satisfied it is improbable that there will be anything left to satisfy anybody else.

WONDERFUL BIRD.—An exchange says that a new and wonderful bird has been discovered by the great German naturalist, Frederick G. Obee. It has been named the sunset bird, from its peculiar cry, "soleil couche," which is French for "the sun sets." As a curiosity it ranks second only to the far-famed phillaloo bird, discovered in the far-center of India, which is so called from its habit of sticking its bill in the sand and whistling "phillaloo, phillaloo." It has a queer habit of wading into the water and then wading out again, and when closely pursued, nimbly retreats down its capacious throat and sits there grinning defiance at the baffled pursuer.

CAMP FIRE.—George Wright Post No. 1, G. A. R., and Ladies' Relief Corps No. 2 will hold a camp fire this evening at Grand Army hall. An attractive programme of exercises has been prepared, consisting of recitations, vocal and instrumental music, etc. The ladies' relief corps will issue rations during the entertainment.

AMICABLY ARRANGED.—Yesterday [illegible] committee of the board of trade and a delegation of manufacturers met Mr. T. F. Oakes, vice president of the Northern Pacific, and had separate conferences with him. All the points of complaint were fully discussed, and the meetings resulted in promises that the company would remedy them.

CLOSING ON ELECTION DAY.—A movement is on foot among the merchants of this city to close their places of business on election day. It is stated that the business portion of the city will be canvassed to-day with this object. It is thought there will be little opposition to the suggestion.

U. S. CIRCUIT COURT.—Judge Deady will deliver an opinion in this court this morning in the case of Parkhurst et al. vs. Hosford et al. and also a decision on the motion to strike out parts of the answer in Murphy vs. Smith et al.

ENGLISHMEN IN AMERICAN POLITICS.

Views of a Portland Gentleman Just Returned from England. Strong Desire Abroad to See Cleveland Elected.

It being a notorious fact here as elsewhere that English influence was going solid for Cleveland, and unusual activity having been observed among the English residents of Portland as the campaign draws to a close, a reporter of THE OREGONIAN yesterday undertook to ascertain what might be the cause of their action. Several of our English residents who were accosted on the subject were disposed to be reticent about the matter. The reporter then called on Mr. William Reid, who has just returned from England, and found him more free to talk.

"What is the opinion expressed in England about our candidates for president?" asked the reporter.

"Almost unanimously for Cleveland," answered Mr. Reid.

"For what reason?" asked the reporter.

"Well, I traveled over nearly all of England, Ireland and Scotland, especially in the manufacturing districts, and found the idea existed that if Cleveland was elected free trade in America would follow. Many manufacturers told me that since 1881 their exports had fallen off so rapidly to the United States and British colonies that their only hope was free trade in America."

"Does this feeling prevail in London?"

"To a much greater extent. There I had intercourse with merchants, financial men and representatives of the British aristocracy, and do not remember one man who wished Blaine's election. A member of the house of commons for eighteen years, who is a member of her majesty's privy council, once assured me that in a few years free trade would exist in the United States, and then, he said, the manufacturers of Great Britain would get back from America what they had paid her for some years for wheat, cattle and produce."

"Do you think the English people are contributing funds for the expenses of the democratic campaign?"

"A few of the aristocracy and manufacturers are, and did not disguise they were doing so, either; but not to the extent some people here imagine. I was so much astonished at this that, although not a politician myself, I expressed surprise that the British people should interfere in American politics, remarking that I did not think the Americans ever interfered with their Irish politics or affairs."

"Don't you think besides free trade the English people have a faint hope of getting something for the large number of confederate bonds they hold if a democratic president is elected?"

"Well, I did see advertisements in London, frequently, offering to buy confederate bonds, and noticed a wish there frequently expressed in joke, that if the southern people were again in power they might have a chance of getting back what they foolishly invested in confederate bonds. But I think the financiers of the country have no such expectations."

THE DEAF MUTE SCHOOL.

SALEM, Oct. 30.—The board of directors of the Oregon school for the education of deaf mutes held a meeting in this city yesterday, the following members being present: Messrs. Henry Failing, C. B. Bellinger and W. M. Ladd, of Portland, J. L. Thompson, Warner Breyman, George H. Burnett, J. H. Albert and J. C. Thompson. The board organized for the coming year by election of the following officers: Warner Breyman, president; George H. Burnett, secretary, and Henry Failing, treasurer. Messrs. Stratton, Failing and Thompson were re-elected members of the board and Messrs. Albert, Stratton and J. L. Thompson as executive committee. The superintendent submitted his report, which embraced a financial statement of the institution, and balances unexpended were applied toward the liquidation of the building fund. Messrs. Bellinger and Albert were appointed to frame the biennial report to the legislative assembly. The president was authorized to appoint a committee of six ladies as a visiting committee, and after the transaction of some routine business and the visitation of the school, the board adjourned. Messrs. Smith and McFarland, the new teachers, are giving excellent satisfaction, and the institution is in a very flourishing condition, and visitors are made welcome at all times.

WAS NOT ASSESSED.

EAST PORTLAND, Oct. 30.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN.

I wish to correct the article published in the Daily Standard of the 26th, in stating that the postmaster of East Portland had been assessed $400 by the republican national committee for the purpose of helping defray the expenses of the present presidential campaign. With regard to said statement I wish to say it is utterly false. No assessment has been levied upon me for that purpose, neither have I been called upon to contribute funds to that effect.

MARY COUGILL, P. M.

OFFICE OF BOARD OF FIRE COMMISSIONERS, PORTLAND, OR., [illegible]

Captain E. B. [illegible]—Dear Sir: [illegible] the [illegible] board of fire commissioners attended the exhibition last evening given to test the extinguishment power of the Harden Hand Grenades, and we [illegible] say that their [illegible] was simply wonderful and far beyond our expectations. As fire commissioners, and speaking for what we believe to be the best interests of our citizens, [illegible] should be only too well pleased to know that these Grenades were distributed throughout every [illegible] factory, store and every private dwelling throughout the city. Were this done, many fires would be extinguished in their incipiency that would otherwise become serious. Yours truly,

GEORGE L. STORY,
JAMES LOTAN,
HENRY ACKERMAN,
Fire Commissioners.

[illegible] WATER?

[illegible] the bar of Swan island was [illegible] to the city [illegible] the winter under the direction of Captain Hoyt. [illegible] has been cut through the most troublesome bar on the river. It is claimed by pilots that the dredger should have been put to work at the mouth of the river, where there is a small ridge which could have been cut away in less than a week. The matter was presented to the council committee on dredger, who consulted Captain Powell, U. S. engineer. They were informed that soundings made very recently showed twenty feet depth at zero of the gauge on a line east of the channel commonly used by pilots. Upon this information the matter was dropped, because twenty feet is ample depth.

But the pilots maintain that they cannot find the twenty feet, though they have followed closely the line indicated by the government charts. This week a vessel drawing seventeen feet ten inches scraped her bottom coming up. An OREGONIAN reporter yesterday saw three pilots, at separate times and places, and each corroborated the statement that there was certainly not more than eighteen feet at the mouth of the river. They explain the discrepancy between their own experience and the knowledge of the engineers, that the soundings were not so accurate as they should have been, and that several lumps must have been missed by the lead. Unless the pilots have willfully misstated the facts—and there is no reason for their wanting to lie about the matter—there is not the depth claimed. Certainly a man taking a ship through has more thorough and practical knowledge of the depth than any man can get with the lead-line. If it is true that there is less than twenty feet of water at the mouth of the river, some arrangement ought to be made for dredging a sufficient channel. The cost will be so small as compared with the benefits, as not to be worthy of consideration. The pilots claim that if a cold snap comes during the winter vessels drawing over seventeen and a half or eighteen feet will have to lighten. This is just what the taxpayers and business men of the city do not want to see. When the question of Portland keeping the lower Willamette open by dredging was under discussion, not a voice was raised against the expenditure. The same necessity for protecting our port exists now as then, and shipping should not be taxed with the expense of lighterage when the outlay of a few dollars will prevent it. Portland has effective dredging apparatus and ought to cut the channel down to the depth required by sea going craft.

THE EAST SIDE.

OVERSTEPPED THE BOUNDS.

James Norton, who owns property on the south east corner of Fourth and Hassalo streets, Holladay's addition, has just had a brick fence built on the side fronting on Fourth street, three feet high and 180 feet long. Declining to have a surveyor set the proper boundary line for the same, he took his chances on a supposition, and the result is the wall encroaches on the street no less than eighteen inches. Street Commissioner Barte discovered the mistake when the wall was but half completed, and notified Geo. Robinson, the contractor, and also Mr. Norton's agent, Judge Risley, of Portland; but the wall was completed, despite his notification. Judge Risley falling sick, the agency was transferred to Matlock, McGuire & Co., who state they have the money to pay for the wall, but that it will not be paid over until it is properly located. The contractor, however, claims that he built the wall according to directions, and that he advised a survey to be made, which advice was unheeded. One thing is certain, the wall will have to be removed off the street, suffer who may.

THE DUNN CASES CONTINUED.

The cases against the three men employed by John L. Dunn to tear down and remove C. Buckman's fence, were called in Justice Coleman's court yesterday morning, J. C. Moreland appearing for complainant and M. C. Mulkey for defendants. The evidence went to show that defendants tore down the fence as charged, and refused to desist when ordered so to do so by Mr. Buckman. Mr. Buckman also testified to his undisputed possession for seventeen years, and John Campbell testified to his having surveyed the property according to Mr. Buckman's deed, and found the eastern line where the fence stood to be the same as that designated by Mr. Burrage in a prior survey. At the close of taking testimony, Mr. Mulkey asked that the cases be continued until this morning in order to obtain the evidence of John L. Dunn, who had gone down the river, as he proposed to show by his testimony that Mr. Buckman's fence was on his property and had a right to have it removed. Mr. Moreland objected to postponement, as the seventeen years' quiet possession settled the question of ownership and the guilt of defendants had been clearly proven, they refusing to desist their depredations when ordered to do so. The court, however, granted the request of Mr. Mulkey, and continued the case till 9 o'clock this morning.

FAULTY WORK STOPPED.

C. L. Spore, who received the contract for the elevated roadways and sidewalks on J street, sublet the sidewalk along the Cully block to Atkinson & Wakefield, Mr. Cully's agents, and a Mr. Kent received the contract from them to do the work. The work was commenced a day or two since, but the street commissioner soon discovered it was not being done according to ordinance, and vetoed the proceedings forthwith. The fault lay in the mudsills. The ordinance requires they be formed of 10x10 sills resting on planks 3x12, and the only sill being used was a small two-inch plank. Three or four bents have been erected on these slight underprops, and will have to be removed and replaced by the proper sills before work proceeds.

END OF OFFICIAL YEAR.

To-day ends the present official terms of recorder, auditor and clerk, city marshal, city treasurer, city attorney, city surveyor and street commissioner, and to-morrow the new terms commence. Of these officers all the present incumbents will continue their positions except the recorder and treasurer, R. L. Gillespie succeeding J. T. Stewart as the former, and Thos. Welch succeeding Frank Logan as the latter. The new treasurer is only just convalescing from a long spell of sickness, and will probably be unable to attend to his official duties for a week or more. Meantime his brother, W. B. Welch, will act as his deputy.

HAND CUT.

Clement Berry, son of Thomas Berry of the Britannia brewery, while engaged washing bottles yesterday afternoon, broke one of them, one of the pieces inflicting a gash of a semi-circular form immediately below the lower joint of the first finger of the right hand, about an inch in length, and severing an artery. Dr. Day Raffety, who attended him, found it necessary to sew up the wound.

MUST BE MOVED.

On the south side and near the foot of J street are two buildings owned by Captain Foster and Robert Bell which encroach upon the street some three feet. In view of the street improvement now in progress it becomes necessary to move the buildings back to the street line, and the street commissioner has notified the owners to do so forthwith.

ESCAPES PUNISHMENT.

It appears the cases against the notorious M. W. Taylor—one for the larceny of a revolver, and another for threatening to kill—have been "compromised," whatever that may mean, and consequently the trial for the former charge, set for hearing in Justice Simpson's court yesterday morning, did not come off.

RECEPTION.

Rev. S. Wood, the new pastor of the Congregational church, was given a public reception by the members last evening, which took place at the church and was well attended. Appropriate addresses and responses, singing by the choir and refreshments made up an evening of rare social pleasure and profit.

THE MEDICAL COLLEGE.

The winter term of the medical department of the Willamette University opens Monday, November 3, at the college building, corner Jefferson and East Park streets. Following is the faculty:

Fifty-four oil paintings, valued at $343,000, and designed for exhibition at the Metropolitan Museum of Art, arrived in New York a few days since, and were admitted free of duty. Among them are several worth $25,000 apiece.

A number of British noblemen were arrested in Yellowstone park and heavily fined for mutilating curious ledges by chipping off pieces which they intended to carry home with them.

SUCCESSFUL EXHIBITORS.

THE [illegible] ART PHOTOGRAPHERS.

The [illegible] specimens of art executed in the studio of the above gentlemen, in the [illegible] [illegible] on Washington street, and exhibited by them at the Portland Mechanics' fair received the highest and only premium. They were absolutely beyond competition or even comparison. Amongst their exhibit were photographs that have been executed upward of five years, and which still challenge competition with anything in their line. Since that time they have added every improvement known to science, and they stand to-day at the very head of their profession.

THE COLUMBIA COMMERCIAL COLLEGE

Received the highest premium at the fair for their display of penmanship and stipple work. They exhibited some of the most beautiful works of art ever executed with a pen. The principal pieces are the work of W. S. James, the principal, and J. A. Vergon, the secretary. In no place on the Pacific coast can so thorough an education in penmanship be obtained, or at so reasonable a cost, as at this college, which is located at corner of Second and Salmon streets, Portland. This was the only exhibit of penmanship that received any award of merit.

TWO FIRST PREMIUMS.

Himes, the printer, of No. 5 Washington street, exhibited the only printing press in the fair. He had it in actual operation every evening. Upon this he daily printed a spicy little sheet which he named the "Daily Quill." This was essentially a "fair" publication and was the only really witty one connected therewith. It was little, but good. For this exhibition of a printing press in operation Himes obtained a well merited blue ribbon. His exhibit of fine printing had many points of special interest. He has recently patented a process of illuminating the borders and corners of cards, envelopes, etc., which he calls chaos type. He executes it beautifully in all colors, which are so mixed and mingled that the result might properly be called crazy printing. The effect is surprisingly handsome and perfectly unique. Nothing like it was ever seen before; every piece is different. In fact, it would be impossible to produce two alike. Like the colors and figures in a kaleidoscope they are continually changed. Himes stands at the head of his profession as an artistic printer. He is constantly bringing out new styles. He keeps always on hand the only complete stock of legal blanks in this city, which he sells wholesale or retail.

J. H. Robbins & Son

Did not exhibit in the Mechanics' fair this year, in consequence of extreme pressure of business, caused by their grand reduction in prices. When they were appointed sole agents for the Henry F. Miller piano for the northwest they determined to mark down the whole of their extensive stock to the very lowest possible prices. They now offer the J. H. Robbins piano, the McCammon piano, the Whitney & Holmes and the Kimball organ, and the whole of their large stock at prices that need only to be seen to be appreciated. Their stock of sheet music is extensive and complete. They are just in receipt of a large invoice of guitars, violins, accordions, music boxes, strings and trimmings, etc., in great variety, which they are selling at bedrock prices. Call and examine before you purchase. Country orders solicited and goods carefully shipped. Their store is No. 229 First street.

ASSOCIATION OF CONGREGATIONAL CHURCHES.

The Willamette Association of Congregational Churches held its autumn meeting at Salem Tuesday evening and Wednesday of this week. In the absence of Rev. J. W. Harris, who was to preach the associational sermon Tuesday evening, the Rev. H. S. Mills delivered a thoughtful and pleasing address drawn from the Christology of the book of John.

Wednesday morning the devotional exercises were led by Rev. G. W. Lockwood of Oregon City. Rev. Dr. Atkinson then followed with a presentation of the missionary spirit. Rev. F. R. Marvin advocated systematic benevolence over churches, and favored the giving of money not only to home missions, but to foreign missions as well, and thought that if churches could have more channels of charity the benevolence would be much greater.

The devotional exercises in the afternoon were led by Deacon Smith. The question of "The Church and Amusements" was introduced by a very happy address from Chaplain Stubbs, and the debate, which was a very interesting one, covering nearly two hours, was participated in by Rev. F. R. Marvin, Rev. George H. Lee, Rev. H. S. Mills and others.

In the evening Rev. G. H. Lee read a very able paper on "Doctrine and Life." Mrs. H. S. Mills presented a paper on "The Home Life of Children," which was of peculiar interest as giving a woman's view of the duties of the church and of the family to the children. Rev. P. S. Knight explained his work with the deaf mutes, and Chaplain Stubbs spoke of the duty of the church to the unconverted.

Subscribers have first choice of seats on Monday, November 3. Box office for the general public, Wednesday, November 5.

THE COLUMBIA BAR [illegible]

[illegible]

ASTORIA, [illegible] 9.—I [illegible] been expected that Major [illegible] New [illegible] and Colonel Mendell of the United States [illegible] I have received a few [illegible] a business conference with the proposed bar improvement, preparatory to returning east. Engagements necessitate General Newton's immediate return, and he therefore leaves on the outgoing steamer. This evening a deputation from the chamber of commerce, consisting of Vice President Dr. A. C. Kinney, Secretary E. C. Holden, I. W. Case, A. W. Berry, Captain Gray and Colonel John Adair, called upon General Newton and had a pleasant interview with him on board the steamship Columbia. The general complimented the chamber on the success of its persistent efforts to attract the attention of the government to the necessity and importance of the permanent improvement of the mouth of the Columbia river. It was a work that required great engineering skill, but the plans and specifications were all completed and had been approved by those in authority. He assured the gentlemen present that any seeming delay was no delay at all. He would have wished that the appropriation had been larger with which to have commenced the preliminary work, as it was an invariable rule that in such cases the work always went ahead faster than the appropriations were made. In the present instance care must be taken that the work shall be so constructed that if the appropriation made is exhausted before another is available, the result of previous expenditure and labor shall not be lost.

In reply to a question, the general said he could not state when active operations would commence, it depended on circumstances. He understood this was about the commencement of our stormy season, tramways had to be built and much rock quarried, and perhaps this was not a good time to commence such work. There were, however, many preliminaries which must be attended to without delay, and as Colonel Mendell and Captain Powell were here for the purpose of visiting the scene of the proposed operations, the result of their investigations would soon be apparent. All contracts to be let, he stated, would be advertised and open to competition by all responsible bidders. Captain Powell would have special charge of this work under Colonel Mendell. He had been relieved of much of his other work in order that he might devote more time to this.

The general pleasantly assured the deputation from the chamber of commerce that in a certain sense the successful termination of the work (and he had no doubt whatever that it could be made successful) was more in their hands than his. His duty was to carry on the work according to the plans and specifications approved at headquarters, and it was for them to see to it that their representatives in congress secured the necessary appropriations.

After paying a deserved compliment to our able state representatives in congress for their diligent and successful efforts in the past, the deputation thanked the general for his kindness and wishing him a pleasant voyage, stepped ashore.

MRS. LOUISE HUMPHREY SMITH.

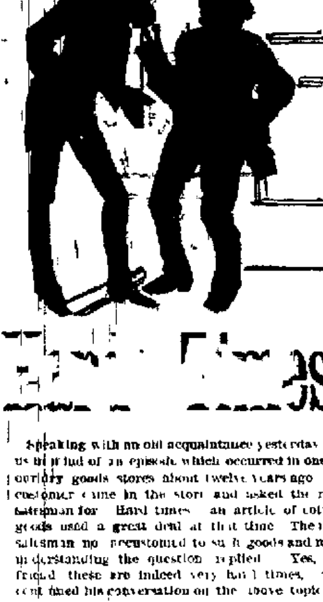
PORTLAND, Oct. 30.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN.

Mrs. Louise Humphrey Smith scored a success last evening at the entertainment given by her at the New Market theater, and her dramatic presentations were more than a surprise to her many personal friends who were so fortunate as to be present.

Mrs. Smith is an old resident of Portland, and here she first began a course of study, which as shown by her recitals last evening has been to some purpose, and her triumphs are a pleasure to all. When death here rudely invaded her happy home and left her alone, and when she marked out for herself the course she designed to pursue, her friends looked on, hardly daring to offer encouragement, the difficulties to overcome were so many and so great. But she persevered, and to-day, she comes before us, after her studies abroad, an artist. I cannot add to the discriminating criticism, appearing in THE OREGONIAN of this morning, but merely wish to add my pleasure at the marked success of one of Portland's old residents.

S. K. I.



Speaking with an old acquaintance yesterday put us in mind of an episode which occurred in one of our dry goods stores about twelve years ago. A customer came in the store and asked the new salesman for "Hard times," an article of cotton goods used a great deal at that time. The new salesman not accustomed to such goods and misunderstanding the question replied: "Yes, my friend, these are indeed very hard times," and continued his conversation on the above topic to the amazement of his customer.

But here we are ourselves this time and we want to impress this on the minds of the public that without any fun or idle talk these are indeed hard times. And why is it? Our answer is over production. We have enjoyed prosperity too long, and never thought of a wet day, and here we are all staring at each other with the query, what shall we do? We don't propose to sleep on "hard times." Our goods must be sold, and we commence to-day with the FREIGHTS—Arrivals consist of five vessels, two with prior charters, one bringing inward cargo. Two vessels cleared with wheat and three are about ready to clear. Spot business comprised the [illegible] Golden Gate and [illegible] for wheat. The second secured 47s 6d for orders, in other instances the rate is withheld. To arrive a light business was done in a private way. Handy iron on spot may be quoted 47s 6d, but the request is limited at this [illegible] of the market cannot be called steady. [illegible] The San Francisco freight market is [illegible] during the past week. Last year at this time the Columbia [illegible] showed a total of [illegible] registered tons [illegible] distributed as follows: Under charter for grain [illegible] loading miscellaneous [illegible] disengaged and suitable for wheat [illegible] for sale [illegible]. The list [illegible] footed up [illegible] registered tons, of which [illegible] yet reached the river. A comparison of the figures of to-day given below will show a greatly reduced list now as against last year.

WHEAT—The English market shows a decline of sixpence on all cargoes during the week. [illegible] probably more, as private cables report [illegible] difficult, with some shading necessary to effect prompt sales. This has had a marked effect upon local values, and there is a general disposition to lower bids. Chicago and New York quote a lower range of values. San Francisco quotes a higher extreme, but the market is weak. Local buyers have done less on spot, one firm lowering valley limits to $1 10, and it is claimed to-day that parcels are being purchased in the interior at this. The quotation here is $1 10@1 12½, with the latter figure being paid. Evidently shippers are not working together. For Walla Walla there is shown a disposition to bid down, say to $1 0[illegible], but [illegible] is paid for best shipping grades. This all indicates a weakening market and a quoted decline is among the probabilities. [illegible] says that sales of cargoes have recently been made at figures which would permit of no more than $1 06@1 07 being paid here for valley. Since the dispatch of some cargoes there is an actual decline of 2 shillings to be submitted to, and shippers are carrying considerable in the hope of better values later on.

FLOUR—Best brands find a very rapid sale and [illegible] export business is being good. Country [illegible] large stock and dull sale. The [illegible] the past three months is but [illegible] the same time last year [illegible] has been [illegible] demand for foreign export. The [illegible] valley brands receipts for three months past being [illegible] bbls against 31,70[illegible] same time last year. This movement [illegible] increased local consumption [illegible] Standard brands are quoted at $[illegible] less [illegible] discount, and others $3 50@4.

MILLSTUFF—A liberal movement is contracted [illegible] to San Francisco. The local trade is fairly supplied, but prices are steady. [illegible] Bran [illegible] middling [illegible]

POTATOES—Receipts of the past few days have fallen off, the demand being less. Exports by last steamer were 7,00[illegible] sacks, the largest shipment yet made. This movement is expected to show a de[illegible] speculation [illegible] which is paid by [illegible] are easily supplied [illegible]

IN THE HOUSE OF COMMONS.

LONDON, Oct. 30.—In the House of Commons to-day Gladstone said the advances on Khartoum would have been made earlier had it been possible.

A motion granting precedence of all other business to the franchise bill was adopted without debate.

Lord Randolph Churchill moved the amendment to the address in reply to the queen's speech, of which he gave notice Tuesday. This censures the Right Hon. Joseph Chamberlain, president of the board of trade, "for inciting, by his speeches, interference with the freedom of political discussions and justifying riot and disorder." In making the motion Lord Randolph charges Chamberlain with moral and direct complicity in the recent Aston riots, which made things very uncomfortable for his lordship.
